

Nagle Catholic College Carnarvon Campus

Nagle Catholic College Heritage

Nagle Catholic College is a coeducational catholic secondary college for Years 7 to 12, enrolling in excess of 1200 students in 2015. It serves the Geraldton community and the Geraldton Diocese. The College is an amalgamation of a Presentation Sisters' school, Stella Maris College and a Christian Brothers' school, St Patrick's College. The College is named after Nano Nagle, the Foundress of the Presentation Order and it maintains links with both of these Orders. Nagle offers a complete education to cater for the development of students' spiritual, religious, intellectual, physical, social and emotional needs.

Working in Partnership

The WA Catholic Education Office, in partnership with St Mary's Star of the Sea School and Nagle Catholic College, has recently announced the establishment of a Nagle Catholic College campus in Carnarvon. This new campus is a direct response to a strong community desire for students to have the opportunity to complete secondary schooling in Carnarvon, in a Catholic context and as such, is reflective of Nagle Catholic College's motto – 'for others'.

St Mary's Star of the Sea School provides K-10 Catholic education opportunities for Carnarvon students. Historically, students have completed Year 11 and Year 12 at the Carnarvon Community College or have attended boarding school in either Geraldton or Perth.

One Nagle Community

Commencing with small numbers in Year 11 2016, it is anticipated that in subsequent years, the number of students and staff will grow substantially. Despite being some 500kms apart, both campuses are part of the one Nagle community and as such, students and staff will have opportunities to join together for various events at both campuses, to develop and celebrate this sense of community.

Students at Nagle Catholic College Carnarvon Campus will engage in contemporary learning experiences, with a focus on independent learning in an online environment. The desired approach to teaching will reflect contemporary education practices, with a focus on guiding student learning to assist them in developing independent learning skills.

Carnarvon Campus Pathway Offerings

Nagle Catholic College Carnarvon Campus will offer ATAR and Industry pathways. ATAR students will initially complete their studies online through the School of Isolated and Distant Education (SIDE). Students commencing Year 11 in 2017 will become a part of the ATAR classes run on the Geraldton campus, in an online environment, with opportunities for some face-to-face support opportunities provided by the Geraldton based teachers. Students will also be supported by the Carnarvon based teacher, who will assist students with time management, engagement in their learning and basic course content queries, in addition to monitoring student progress and liaising with SIDE and Geraldton based teachers.

The focus of the Industry Pathway is 'transition' – to further study, an apprenticeship, traineeship or employment. In order to facilitate a successful transition, Industry Pathway students will participate in learning both in both school and industry environments, with a split of 3 days in school and 2 days out of school.

During their time in school, Industry Pathway students will complete a suite of programs including Religious Education, English, Maths and various endorsed and VET programs designed to aid a successful transition. These programs will be developed by Geraldton based teachers and delivered in a face-to-face context by the Carnarvon based teacher.

During their 2 days out of school, students will participate in either a School Based Apprenticeship, a School Based Traineeship, work experience, or further study at Durack Institute of Technology or the Carnarvon Trade Training Centre, dependant on their preferred post-school career choice.
